Biz Stone at Early Twitter

A guide to his letters, blog posts and dispatches, 2006–2010

90	145	160	89	19	503
2006	2007	2008	2009	2010	blog posts total

Biz's writing to Twitter's early users and team came through three channels:

1. The user email newsletter (2007–2010). Short, chatty "update from Twitter HQ" notes sent to everyone with an account: new features, new hires, fun accounts to follow. Twitter never archived them publicly, so the only surviving copies are the ones people reposted on their own blogs (see below).
2. The Twitter Blog, blog.twitter.com (Aug 2006 on). Biz wrote nearly all of it in the early years: 503 of the 661 posts from 2006 to 2010. He used it the same way as the email, but more often, sometimes several posts a day. Twitter.com removed this archive, but it survives on web archives. The full index is in section 4.
3. Internal weekly dispatches to the team (2008–2010). In 2025 Biz found 145 of his weekly emails to Twitter staff and early stakeholders in his personal account and began publishing them on Medium as Keep Up The Good Work.

1 · The user newsletter: surviving editions

March 2007 · Reposted by Hunter Walk (2013)

"Twitter Celebrating in Austin" — SXSW invite

Biz's note to users ahead of SXSW 2007: text a code to join the Twitter feed on the big screens at the convention center, plus news of John Edwards and a band joining, Twitter's first birthday, and two new engineers.

May 1, 2008 · Reposted by Victor Caballero

"A semi-monthly update from Twitter HQ"

Addressed to "Twitter-ers": James Buck's Twitter-assisted release from an Egyptian jail, the launch of Twitter Japan, Mother's Day e-card ideas, welcoming two new engineers, and a nudge to fill out your profile.

March 2010 · Reposted by Inman and Byrnes Media

Twitter news update — announcing Chirp

A later edition announcing Chirp, Twitter's first official developer conference, and asking readers what they thought of getting an email newsletter at all.

https://www.inman.com/2010/03/8/cant-go-wrong-with-e-mail-newsletter/

These are the only editions I could find reposted online. Others probably sit in early users' old Gmail or Yahoo inboxes. Searching "from:biz@twitter.com" or "Twitter-ers" in yours might turn some up.

2 · Keep Up The Good Work: the internal dispatches

Published by Biz on Medium in 2025 (members-only). Each part pulls excerpts from his 2008–2010 weekly team emails.
